

How can I find out more?

Each of the 42 Areas of England and Wales publishes an annual report on the workings of MAPPA. This reviews what has happened locally and the plans for the coming year. The annual report will provide contact details for each agency should you wish to seek further information. A copy of the report can be found on local websites or in the public protection section of the NPS website:

What should I do if I have particular concerns?

The number of offenders in our communities who pose a risk of serious harm to others is thankfully very small. However, the thought that a known offender may pose a risk of serious harm to you or someone you care about can be very distressing. And it may be difficult to know who to speak to. If you believe that you have specific evidence that a serious offence has been or is about to be committed it is important that you share this information with the police.

You can also access helpful information through the Stop it Now! website. Stop it Now! aims to prevent child sexual abuse by challenging all adults to take responsibility to protect children.

Making Communities Safer

Managing risk through MAPPA
– protecting communities from violent and sexual offenders

What sort of people pose a risk of harm to others?

Offenders come from across all communities and are of no single age, gender, ethnicity or position in society. What is common is that the offences they commit are unacceptable, often resulting in significant physical and emotional damage. Their identification and conviction is therefore a priority. Once convicted not all offenders go on to commit further offences. Some do and it is those people who need to be identified and action taken to prevent them ruining the lives of others.

Who needs protection?

Offenders often target those within our communities who they perceive are vulnerable or weak either because of age, gender or social circumstances. The vast majority of sexual offending is committed by people who are known to the victim either as family members, friends or acquaintances.

What is MAPPA?

MAPPA stands for Multi-Agency Public Protection Arrangements – a set of arrangements established by police, probation and the prison service in your area (known as the Responsible Authority) to assess and manage the risk posed by sexual and violent offenders. Other agencies that co-operate in MAPPA include youth offending teams, Jobcentre plus, local education authorities, local housing authorities, registered social landlords, social services, strategic health authority, Care Trusts and NHS Trusts, and electronic monitoring providers.

How does it operate?

The principles that govern MAPPA are simple:

- Identify who may pose a risk of harm
- Share relevant information about them
- Assess the nature and extent of that risk
- Find ways to manage that risk effectively, protecting victims and reducing further harm

The arrangements operate across England and Wales and allow agencies to review the risk posed by offenders and the actions taken to manage them.

Central to all risk management is the need to consider the protection of previous and possible future victims. As part of any risk management strategy it may be considered necessary for information about offenders to be disclosed directly to others by the police in order to prevent harm, such as new partners, landlords or even school head teachers. Information is not disclosed to the public unless they are in a position to better monitor and manage the offender or unless they are potentially at risk.

Who checks it is all working?

A Strategic Management Board monitors and reviews how these public protection arrangements are working in each local area. Chaired by a senior representative of the police, probation or prison service, the Board includes senior representatives of other agencies.

Each Board has also now appointed two members of the public as lay advisers to keep an eye on what's happening and to improve the links with the community. The lay advisers are there to challenge members of the Board over how the arrangements are working and offer a different viewpoint when necessary.
